

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

WAITING FOR MR. BRYAN'S ARMY

SIR,—I am a patriotic American, born and raised in the beautiful and cultured city of Milwaukee.

If the United States gets into the war I am perfectly willing, and in fact anxious, to be as patriotic as the next fellow. In the event of hostilities, however, there will be a number of unpatriotic Americans who will say: "Let George do it!" The astonishing part of it will be that there will be mighty few Germans in this class.

There are legions of Georges in this country. Not many of them will fail to answer their country's call and offer their lives at the altar of patriotism. Few will stop to consider what the dowry will be. But why should they be patriotic when slackers like myself are merely waiting for Bryan's army of a million men to spring to arms?

ARCHIBALD PRATT.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.